It truly is For Such a Time as This that film producer, friend and pilgrim, Lisa Darden, has embraced the challenge and responded to the call of fifteen years by bringing the world a powerful message of hope, healing, reconciliation and forgiveness. The film, For Such a Time as This comes with a simple but profound message - God is love and His love is without condition. (1 John 4:16, John 3:16) That message, when truly understood and applied, holds the power to radically change the face of our world.

Lisa is quite an impressive woman of God. Her passion for using her multifaceted gifts (visionary, producer, director, videographer, writer, and plain ol' funny lady, and the list goes on) to tell this story, is truly a refreshing inspiration to me personally. I have watched her begin with nothing but the call of God -- to now arrive at a place of earned credibility and confirmed divine purpose. What a journey it has been indeed.

It is her belief in her calling and her commitment to follow that call (despite the cost), that has inspired me the most. I believe that she knows that For Such a Time as This packs tremendous potential to change lives, for it both shares the facts and shatters the myths of who God is and who he will or will not accept to love. The powerful dialogue exchanged in this pointed film opens doors for emotional healings, relational reconciliations and true, heartfelt empathy and understanding between the "religious" and "non-religious" alike. Quite frankly, no one will walk away unmoved or unprovoked.

This is Lisa's maiden voyage. She has set to sea with her eyes firmly planted on Jesus Christ as her chief guide. Because His message, the Gospel, will be exalted in this film, I am led to believe that He will draw the multitudes to Himself through it. (John 12:32)

My personal prayer is two-fold. First, that God's anointing will be upon this film and it will move people from complacent, crusty religious comfort zones to the vibrant, invigorating, risk-taking abundant life that Christ came to give all who placed their faith in Him. (John 10:10) And secondly, that we will, because of viewing it, seriously examine our own lives in context of the great commandment to love God first and then "our neighbor as ourselves." (Matt. 22:37)

Keep going Lisa, this is just the beginning. Stay close to the Master, He is the Way. I hope to be within ear range the day you finally hear, "Well done, good and faithful servant." (Matt 25:23)

Always covering your back in prayer.....
